

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

Bolger & O'Hearn Marches Toward Zero-Carbon Future with Solar Array

FALL RIVER, MA | 03-01-2017

In its continuing effort to “go green,” Bolger & O’Hearn outfitted its manufacturing facility and headquarters with a state-of-the-art solar array. This advanced array will produce an outstanding 87kWh of energy a day (or 2,610 kWh a month)!

“The decision to implement solar panels is really emblematic of our commitment to sustainability,” said Shaun O’Hearn,

President of Bolger & O’Hearn

Within the textile chemical industry, Bolger & O’Hearn has been a leading innovator. Its latest innovations include Altopel F3, a durable water repellent that’s free of fluorine. The result is a textile finish that enhances durability and waterproofing without creating toxic fluorocarbon byproducts or harmful bio-accumulation.

“Bolger & O’Hearn is moving towards a zero-carbon future,” said Shawn Honeycutt, Sales Manager for Bolger & O’Hearn. “We have continued to make considerable investments in being the leader in eco-friendly sustainable manufacturing processes not only because that is what our customers want but more importantly it is what our organization wants.”

“Brands want to know that their vertical partners are as committed to sustainability as they are,” said O’Hearn. “We have continued to show we are equally if not more committed and these common goals have forged incredible relationships with those brands.”

To learn more about Bolger & O’Hearn, visit www.bolgerohearn.com. To access a complete press kit, go to www.bolgerohearn.com/media.

About Bolger & O’Hearn

Founded in 1969, Bolger & O’Hearn has been selling uniquely efficient and consistently high-quality chemicals for over 45 years. Its highly personalized service approach has been the pillar of its success. Since its traditional beginnings in the textile industry, Bolger & O’Hearn has expanded its product line into the non-wovens and paper industries. Its comprehensive product line is sold and distributed globally. To learn more, go to bolgerohearn.com. For regular updates, follow Bolger & O’Hearn on Facebook, Twitter or LinkedIn.

Bolger & O’Hearn 47 Slade St, Fall River, MA 02724, USA
Phone: +1.508.676.1518

shoneycutt@bolgerohearn.com
www.bolgerohearn.com